Q&AS

HOW DO YOU ASSIST YOUR PATIENTS IN NAVIGATING THEIR HEALTH INSURANCE ISSUES?

“My wife, Amy, as patient advocate for my medical practice, and our staff are very experienced in helping patients with their health insurance issues. Her former 12-year career as a corporate and aerospace lawyer allows Amy to advocate effectively for patients. Amy and our staff have helped hundreds of patients in getting their reconstructive surgeries approved and paid for by their health insurance.”

WHAT'S MOST REWARDING ABOUT YOUR WORK?

“The most rewarding aspect of my medical practice is the ability to help patients restore their abilities, function and confidence. I help patients with issues that otherwise can't be mended through their bodies' natural healing process. We pride ourselves in treating our patients like we would treat our family.”

NEW ADDITION

My wife, Amy, joined my medical practice as patient advocate after leaving Northrop Grumman Corporation as corporate counsel. She transitioned from her aerospace law practice so she could focus on providing the best care for our daughter, Cora, who suffers from an ultra-rare genetic disorder, Angelman syndrome. Amy has been proactive in ensuring that Cora receives the best therapies and treatment available. Her experience as a health care advocate for Cora led Amy to feel strongly that my patients should benefit from her advocacy skills as well. As a patient advocate, she helps my patients successfully navigate the complexities of their health care insurance.

MEMORABLE MOMENT

My wife and I attended an amazing Foundation for Angelman Syndrome Therapeutics (FAST) global summit and gala in December, benefiting research to find a cure for children like Cora. FAST funded more than $8 million in research in 2017, and the gala dinner raised a record of more than $4.1 million. The event drew nearly 1,300 attendees from around the world and was hosted by Colin Farrell, Christina Applegate, Jai Courtney, Taylor Lautner and Retta. We were excited and encouraged about the latest breakthroughs presented by scientists, researchers, and pharmaceutical and biotechnology company leaders working on a cure, which is on the horizon.
